PREFACE

DEAR CLASSMATES,—The only merit of this report is that so many of you desired it. It was begun soon after our thirtieth anniversary, and I soon discovered that your interest was to hear from others and not to communicate your own doings. Nevertheless I have kept on with it, and as it may help us to keep closer in touch with one another, I hope you will think it worth while. It is still incomplete. There are several memorial sketches that should be prepared and several classmates are still to be heard from, but it seems best to wait no longer and to ask you to receive it as it is, with that generous consideration for your class secretary which you have so often shown.

One word should be stated in regard to the finances of the class. Our twenty-fifth anniversary was necessarily expensive. Some who subscribed substantial sums to the Class of 1880 Fund expressed the wish that if the total of subscriptions should exceed the requirements for the proposed gifts to the college, any balance should be added to the Class Fund, which of course finally passes to the college. In accordance with this authority, therefore, the balance has been so treated.

Yours sincerely,

JOHN WOODBURY.

AUDITOR'S REPORT

I HAVE examined the accounts from which the foregoing "Financial Statement" has been drawn, and verified the same from vouchers and other evidence. I certify that the said statement truly reflects the administration of the Class Funds for the period covered thereby, and accurately states the resulting condition of the Fund on June 1, 1912.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

FREDERICK HOBBS ALLEN. "As to what I have done since the last report, I would say that I have continued the practice of my profession, and my firm is the same — Allen & Cammann. I have continued my interest in politics, and am still chairman of the Democratic County Committee of Westchester County. I also served two years on the Executive Committee of the State Committee of the Democratic party in the State of New York."

RUSSELL CARPENTER ALLEN. "I am at the same address and engaged in the same business as at the time of our last report. I served two years as first President of the University Club of San Diego. Am also President of the Lemon Men's Club of Southern California."

WILLIAM HENRY ALLEY. "I moved to Santa Barbara, California, for a permanent home in the Fall of 1905. I went to Japan and China for a pleasure trip in the Spring of 1909 and returned by the Trans-Siberian Railroad. The trip across Siberia was monotonous and uninteresting."

FREDERIC ALMY. "I am still the executive secretary of the Buffalo Charity Organization Society, which is the oldest in this country. Since 1898 I have been a trustee of the George Junior Republic and since 1905 a member of the Council of the National Civil Service Reform League. From 1907 to 1910 I was a member of the executive committee of the National Municipal League, but in 1910 I resigned both from this and as secretary of the Buffalo Civil Service Reform Association (since 1886), not from any lack of interest, but in order to give the places to younger Buffalo men. I am still on the executive committee of our Civil Service Reform Association, and of the active Buffalo Municipal League, which I helped to organize in 1905. I was chairman of a committee which in 1910 organized the National Association of Societies for Organizing Charities. I have been president of the Buffalo Harvard Club, Saturn Club, and Studio Club, and of the Buffalo Social Worker's Club. I am unmarried and live with my brother Francis Almy, '79, in Buffalo winters and in the summer at 'Jericho,' North Evans, a place which we bought twenty-five years ago."

WILLIAM SHANKLAND ANDREWS. "Supreme Court Chambers, Syracuse, N. Y. The statistics that appeared in the last report as to me still hold good. I am still at my old job and there has been no change of any kind."

CHARLES EDWARD ATWOOD. Since 1885 he has had an editorial connection with the Exeter News Letter. Since the Fall of 1900 he has been the Exeter correspondent of the Boston Globe, following a like service of nearly equal length for the Boston Herald. For the past four years he has been an editor of the Bulletin of the Phillips Exeter Academy, an official publication, his co-editor being Joseph S. Ford, of the Class of 1894. It is a congenial post, but during the months of the quarterly's appearance no sinecure. Atwood is one of the nine members of the Public Library Committee in Exeter which has been his home since 1869. He is a member of the executive committee of the New England Association of Academy Alumni.

ROBERT BACON. In 1905 was appointed Assistant Secretary of State by President Roosevelt, and in January, 1909, was appointed Secretary of State, which office he filled for the remainder of Roosevelt's term. In September, 1909, he was appointed by President Taft as Ambassador to France, which post he held until the Spring of 1912, when he resigned to become one of the Fellows of Harvard College. In June, 1907, he had the unique distinction of seeing his three sons captains of the three Harvard crews at New London. A portrait and biographical sketch of Bacon appeared in the Harvard Graduates Magazine of March, 1912.

HENRY CUTLER BALDWIN. "No changes except those which time has wrought. I am practicing medicine and am a physician in the department for nervous diseases in the Massachusetts General Hospital."

MORTON BARROWS. "There is nothing of interest to add to my personal history in the last Class Report."

HENRY TAYLOR BARSTOW. Was born in Boston on November 11, 1858. He was the son of Charles and Martha Maria (Taylor) Barstow. He prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy. After graduation he entered the Harvard Medical School and received the degree of M.D. in 1884. In the following year he began the practice of medicine in Boston. The winters of 1889 and 1890 were spent in study in Vienna, and he made another short visit to Europe in 1902. Barstow was engaged in general practice, but gave special attention to diseases of the digestive organs. Professional work kept him in Boston during the Summer of 1909, and about the middle of August he found himself ill. It soon developed that he was suffering from typhoid fever, and after three weeks of critical illness the end came on September 7. Barstow never married and made his home with his sister, to whom he was deeply attached. His home and office had been for many years at 345 Boylston Street, in Boston. His sunny disposition and cheerful optimism endeared him to his patients and his host of friends. He was a member of the Massachusetts Medical and other medical societies and of several social clubs.

NATHANIEL CILLEY BARTLETT. "Still unmarried; have been to Cuba and Europe on short trips; lawyer with offices in Boston and Haverhill; no books or offices."

CHARLES FREDERICK TIFFANY BEALE. Died September 1, 1901. (See Report VII, p. 7.)

GERARD BEMENT. "Am living at Beverly Farms. Same old delightful world."

CHARLES HORACE BENTON. Still engaged in business in England. Make occasional visits to America.

SHERRARD BILLINGS. "I was married July 3, 1906, to Miss Eleanor Stockton of Boston. My wife died July 27, 1907. My little daughter was born July 26, 1907, and died January 4, 1910. I am still at Groton at work among boys."

ROBERT ROBERTS BISHOP. "In turning to your class report given us in 1905 I find at that date I had been for many years in the commission house of L. C. Chase & Co. of Boston, which connection still exists. My home is in Newton, Mass., as heretofore, but my business has kept me in Detroit constantly the past year. In the Spring of 1909 I made a trip to Europe with our class-mate Moors. I am still unmarried. Rather uneventful, as you see."

HERBERT PORTER BISSELL. "There have been no changes in my family since 1905. As to myself, I was the permanent chairman of the Democratic State Convention which nominated Governor Dix in 1910. Soon after he took office he asked me to accept an appointment as one of the three State Hospital Commissioners, who have the general supervision and care of the State Insane. I have found this work very interesting, and have been associated in it with Colonel William Cary Sanger of the Class of 1874. In January last Governor Dix appointed me a member of the Public Service Commission, but the State Senate, through the influence and control of Mr. Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall, refused to confirm the nomination. Otherwise my life has been peaceful and quiet, and I am still practicing law and devoting as much time to it as I can get from my public duties."

CHARLES BENTON BLAIR. Is still living in Grand Rapids, engaged in the practice of the law; was secretary of the commission created by the Legislature of Michigan to inquire into and report on "Tax Lands and Forestry."

WILLIAM TILDEN BLODGETT. Was married November 16, 1906, at New Haven to Hannah Eugenia Lawrence Whitney. Has two sons. Has travelled extensively through Italy, Sicily, Egypt, and France. Is living on his farm "Brooklands" at Fishkill and each year is more interested in agricultural pursuits.

HUGH LENNOX BOND. "Nothing new; my present official title is General Counsel, B. & O. R. R. Co."

FRANK HERBERT BRACKETT. "I do not think there is anything for me to write that you don't know. Ditson has recently published a biographical dictionary of names in which my name appears. I suppose this may be called an honor."

RUSSELL BRADFORD. "Since the last report I have continued to lead the simple country life of Albemarle County, Virginia, the only break being a trip abroad of thirteen months from March, 1909 to May, 1910, with my family, my wife, and sister-in-law, when we followed the beaten track that most tourists pursue on their first trip, spending the winter and spring in Italy."

CHARLES WESLEY BRADLEY. Died September 22, 1884. (See Report III, p. 25.)

AMOS FRANKLIN BREED. "I retired from active business in 1911. My Boston office is now at 201 Devonshire Street, Boston."

CLIFFORD BRIGHAM. Was born at New Bedford, Mass., on September 25, 1857, and was the son of Lincoln Flagg Brigham, who was for many years Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Massachusetts, and Eliza Endicott (Swain) Brigham. His parents removed to Salem soon after his birth and he prepared for college at the Salem High School. Brigham entered Harvard with the Class of 1879 and was really more closely allied with the members of that class than with the Class of 1880, although he had many warm friends in the latter class. He prepared for the profession of the law at the Harvard Law School in the years 1880 to 1882 and was admitted to the Bar in Boston in 1884. From that time he was engaged in the active practice of his profession in Boston, having also an office in Salem. He made his home in Salem for many years and at one time was President of its Board of Aldermen. In 1900 he married Amy Howe Johnson and removed his home to Boston, and in 1904 he purchased an estate in the suburb of Milton, where he lived until his death. The beginning of his illness dated from the Summer of 1909, but its serious character did not make itself plain until late in the fall, when it was discovered that he was suffering from a serious and incurable internal trouble. He was obliged to give up active work in November, but the end came rather suddenly. He died at his home in Milton on Sunday, March 13, 1910, and was buried from the Old North Church in Salem on March 16th. Brigham had no children and is only survived by his widow.

NAT MAYNARD BRIGHAM. "My only new work of a literary character is found in my letterhead (ILLUSTRATED LECTURES). I am now engaged in writing a lecture on 'The Trail of the Padres,—California Old and New' and 'Our National Parks.' You can rest assured this will make me travel 'far and wide.' I am about to start for Glacier National, Yellowstone, and Rainier Parks in the Northwest. Later in the summer I shall visit the Yosemite, the Big Trees, Mesa Verde, the Petrified Forest, Grand Canyon, etc."

EDWARD BROOKS. "No changes."

LOUIS MAYO BROWN. "Have not changed residence or occupation, gathered in any honors, or distinguished myself in any way."

PHILIP TOWNSEND BUCKLEY. "I am still practicing medicine at 339A Broadway, South Boston."

GEORGE MINOT BUTLER. Is Treasurer of the Richmond Embroidery Works of Tomkinsville, Staten Island, New York.

FRANCIS ELLIOT CABOT. "I do not think that any great changes have taken place in my life history, except that I am now the Secretary of the Boston Board of Fire Underwriters, instead of the Engineer, and I am also a member of the Council of the Underwriters' Laboratories Inc. of Chicago, a testing station for all forms of materials and devices bearing on the fire hazard."

FRANK OLIVER CARPENTER. Is Head Master, Department of Commerce, English High School; has devised a new method of mounting specimens called Commerce Cassettes resembling lantern slides which are widely used, a large number being in the Argentine Museum of Education; has written text-books on "Science of Commerce," "Law of Commerce," and a series of Industrial Readers, "Foods and Their Uses," "Clothing," "Buildings"; has prepared a number of popular lectures on the "Industries of Daily Life," "The Boston You Do Not Know," etc., and has written articles on various subjects for the magazines. In 1909 he organized the "City Guard," an association of boys and girls, but open to any citizen to join. Its purpose is to keep the city clean, to make the city beautiful, and to make the people happier. "The City Guard makes the boy and girl do something for somebody else and is to make them interested citizens all their lives."

IGNATIUS SUMNER CARRUTH. Died August 8, 1883. (See Report III, p. 31.)

HENRY BAINBRIDGE CHAPIN.

Henry Bainbridge Chapin was born at Springfield, Mass., on October 2, 1857. His father was Abel Dexter Chapin and his mother's maiden name was Julia Clark. He prepared for college at St. Mark's in Southboro, in which school he always retained a strong interest, and to which he later sent his two boys for their preliminary education. In college Chapin was a member of the Institute of 1770, Hasty Pudding, Alpha Delta Phi, and St. Paul societies. After graduation he spent a year and a half in foreign travel and on his return entered the service of the Boston & Albany Railroad, with which corporation many of his family had been connected. His grandfather, Chester Chapin, had been President of the road and at this time his uncle, William Bliss, was filling that office. On October 1, 1886, Chapin was appointed assistant general freight agent, and two months later was promoted to the position of general freight agent. In 1898 he was made general traffic manager, and when the Boston & Albany was leased to the New York Central Railroad, he continued for a time in the same capacity for the Boston & Albany Division. The changed condition, however, which necessarily followed with a change of management determined Chapin to try an experiment, the success of which indicates his force of character and business capacity. After twenty-three years of experience as a railroad official, he resigned to enter the banking and brokerage business as a member of the firm of Schirmer, Chapin & Emmons, and to this new occupation he gave his active and successful efforts until the period of his last illness.

Other positions which he held were those of director of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, Boston & Albany Railroad Company, Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company, Taunton and New Bedford Copper Company, and President and Director of the Ware River Railroad Company. He was also a trustee of the Faulkner Hospital and of the Adams Nervine Asylum. He was a member of the Somerset, Country, and University Clubs. He took a deep interest in St. John's Church at Jamaica Plain, of which he was a senior warden. Several years after graduation it was found desirable to add another Boston member to the Class Committee. Chapin accepted this position, in which he took great interest and was of much service, especially on the occasion of our twenty-fifth anniversary.

He was married on October 12, 1887, to Susan Torrey Revere, daughter of Mrs. John Revere of Canton, Mass. Their country home was in Louder's Lane in Jamaica Plain, and later they established a town house on Marlboro Street in Boston. Many of the summer months were passed at "The Glades" at Cohasset or in travel. Two sons were born to them, John Revere, who graduated at Harvard in 1910, and Henry, named for his father, who was accidentally killed in the South Station in 1908. It is hard to believe that this great sorrow which the father bore so manfully may not have had some connection with his last illness. He appeared to retain his robust health until early in the Spring of 1910, when an operation disclosed a cancer in the abdomen which was incurable. He died on May 7, 1910.

These bare facts would give to a stranger but little idea of the noble and lovable character of our classmate, and it is doubly hard to set forth those qualities which endeared him to his friends; in the first place because the incidents of his life were those of a private gentleman and not of a public character, and also because, though he has gone from us, we can but feel that fulsome praise or exaggerated sentiment would be peculiarly out of place in speaking of one whose life was simple, straightforward, and sincere. It was perhaps this frankness and directness, combined with a cordial manner, that made it a pleasure, even to slight acquaintances, to meet him. His strong and healthful personality, the warm grip of the hand, and the cheerfulness of his greeting were convincing, and those who knew him well realized that these were but the natural expression of himself. His mind was singularly direct. There was no beating about the bush or fine-spun reasoning. His conclusions were quickly reached and quickly acted upon. His tastes were social and he was a charming companion. He was a loyal friend. His views of life were wholesome, his enjoyment of living genuine. He was by nature optimistic, and his optimism stood by him in times of great trial, for it was supported by broad human sympathies and a sincere religious belief. Even in those last trying days of pain and sickness, he could rejoice in the good things life had brought to him and by example give courage to those who would but could no longer give him help.

Those last rites which were held in the church in which he had taken so great an interest were of peculiar significance. The service was conducted by Bishop Lawrence, a dear friend, assisted by the rector and rector emeritus of St. John's, Dr. Mann of Trinity, and the head master of St. Mark's. The pall-bearers were his and our classmates, Gaston, Jackson, Weld, Winsor, Peters, Brooks, Saltonstall, and Trimble. Many other classmates were present, some from long distances. The church was filled with relatives and friends. The words were those of the last service of the church, but above and through it all was the silent tribute in our hearts of affection for him who had gone; of thanks for the providence which had made him our friend.

J. W.

CHARLES HENRY CHAPMAN. "I am a clerk in the Pension Office and a member of the Harvard and University Clubs. I wish there were more to report, but this will have to do. With kindest regards to yourself and all classmates."

GEORGE THORNDIKE CHASE. "Have nothing to add to last report."

WILLIAM BRADFORD CLARK. Was born in Detroit, Michigan, on June 1, 1857. His father was Eliphalet Mackensie Clark of that city. His mother, Fanny (Bradford) Clark, was a sister of Gamaliel Bradford of Boston, and after Dr. Clark's death by a second marriage she became the wife of Professor George Martin Lane of Harvard. William Clark never engaged in active business. He had for many years made his home at Colorado Springs, where he originally went to recover his health. There he built him a house suitable to his scholarly and artistic tastes. He was much interested in young men, and was helpful especially to those struggling with ill health. He also helped many in their efforts to obtain a college education. He died at Colorado Springs on July 12, 1912, very suddenly, of heart failure.

WALTER COLE. Died August 7, 1902. (See Report VII, p. 18.)

HARVEY NEWTON COLLISON. Was born in Boston on March 22, 1860. He was the son of John William and Mary Ann (Fogarty) Collison. He prepared for college at the Boston Latin School, and after graduation studied law at the Harvard Law School. After his admission to the Bar, in 1883, he was engaged in practice of the law in Boston. He also was active in political and public life. He was a member of the Boston Common Council in 1883, 1884, and 1885, and a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1887 and 1888. He had also been a member of the Boston School Committee, and was for a number of years a member of the Metropolitan Sewer Commission. He was for a time President of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Massachusetts and a member of other similar organizations. He appeared to be in good health until the fall before his death, when he was attacked by pernicious anaemia, for which there appears to be no remedy. Collison never married and made his home with his mother and sisters in Roxbury, a part of Boston, where he died on March 13, 1906.

WILLIAM HOFF COOK. "In January, 1906, I was appointed Assistant District Attorney of San Francisco, and held that position nearly two terms and until I resigned therefrom the latter part of December, 1909, to resume my general private practice of law. Since then I have continued to live in San Francisco, occupied with a general practice of the law. While I was Assistant District Attorney the great fire occurred in San Francisco, and I experienced with others the hardships of the period of rebuilding and reconstruction. I was also called upon officially to participate in the presentation of many phases of our "Graft Prosecutions" in our Trial and Appellate Courts. I was also called to the United States Supreme Court at Washington in the Fall of 1906 and the Spring of 1909 to argue an important extradition case.

CHARLES STEVENSON DAVIS. Since 1905 he has been a member of the law firm of Davis, Peabody & Brown, 70 State St., Boston. He resides in Plymouth, Massachusetts, in summer, and in Boston in winter. He is a member of social clubs in Boston and Plymouth and a director of various business corporations, banks, and charitable organizations.

JOHN DOANE. "December, 1905, we moved to Greeley, Colorado, to take pastorate of First Congregational Church, in hopes that change would improve Mrs. Doane's health. During our five years there we built a beautiful church costing $29,000. In January, 1910, I brought Mrs. Doane to California in search of health, and she has been in La Sotta since that time, gaining steadily. The first of June, 1911, I gave up my work at Greeley in order that I might be with Mrs. Doane, and have taken charge of a little mission Sunday-school in San Diego at Mission Hills, which should soon grow into a prosperous church. We have just dedicated a bungalow chapel, erected in ten days, for a temporary place of worship. Our home will be in San Diego. In June, 1909, John, Jr., graduated from Oberlin College, and in 1910 from the Conservatory of Music of Oberlin, where he is Instructor of Pipe Organ. Leroy has just graduated from Case School of Applied Sciences and taken a position with the Holoplane Illuminating Co., of Newark, Ohio."

EDWIN MERRICK DODD. "In the Autumn of 1905 I gave up my Providence office and moved my business and my family to Boston, and the next year, 1906, moved my residence to Chestnut Hill, where I still live. I went abroad with my oldest son in February, 1906, for a six weeks trip in Holland and England. I am still in the wool business, with offices at 18 Matthews St., Boston."

FRANK FADEN DODGE. Was born in Woburn, Mass., on June 29, 1859. He was the son of Frank Brickett and Harriet Elizabeth (Faden) Dodge. He prepared for college at the Woburn High School. After graduation he was employed for a time in his father's jewelry business, but in 1883 entered the Boston office of J. P. Crane & Co., manufacturers and dealers in leather. In 1892 he became a member of the firm of Stephen Dow & Co., engaged in the manufacture of leather. In 1899 this business, which had been incorporated, was sold to the American Hide and Leather Co., and Dodge remained in the employ of this company for a year. He then entered the brokerage business in Boston and was for a time with the firm of Burnham, Bennett & Co. Declining health compelled him to give up active business, and after a long illness he died at Rutland, Mass., on March 21, 1912, of pulmonary tuberculosis. Dodge was married February 9, 1881, to Nellie L. Crane of Woburn, who died on January 30, 1906. They are survived by two sons, Harry Crane Dodge (the class baby), who is in the employ of the S. A. Woods Co. of Boston, and Charles Gerald Dodge, who is connected with the Ceylon Tea Company of New York.

JONATHAN DWIGHT, JR. "Have retired from the practice of medicine and devote myself to ornithology. My private collection of North American birds is one of the largest and is now on deposit at the American Museum of Natural History in New York City. Am treasurer of the American Ornithological Union and of the National Association of Audubon Societies."

ARTHUR WENTWORTH HAMILTON EATON. "Since last Class Report I have been almost constantly engaged in historical writing. In 1910 I published a large book that I had been working on almost constantly for three years, 'The History of King's County, Nova Scotia, Heart of the Acadian Land.' Since then I have been at work on a history of Colchester County, Nova Scotia, and have been doing much other writing. My last three books of verse were 'Acadian Ballads' and 'Poems of the Christian Year,' both published in New York in 1905, and 'The Lotus of the Nile and Other Poems,' published in 1907. In 1904 Dalhousie University, Halifax, gave me an M.A., and in 1905 the University of King's College, Windsor, Nova Scotia, the oldest Colonial College of the British Empire, gave me a D.C.L. Besides officiating frequently in Anglican churches in the United States and Canada, I am now giving myself entirely to writing."

RALPH NICHOLSON ELLIS. Was married February 15, 1906, to Elizabeth, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin F. Warder of Washington, D. C. His son, Ralph, was born June 15, 1908. Nothing else to add to last report.

HERBERT HALL EUSTIS. Died February 21, 1903. (See Report VII, p. 22.)

JAMES DEERING FESSENDEN. "I am still practicing law and have had good health without misfortune or affliction since the year of our last report." Has written and published in 1907 "The Life and Public Services of William Pitt Fessenden."

JAMES B. FIELD. "My record as it appears in the last report needs no change."

CHARLES EVERETT FISH. Not heard from.

CHARLES CHAUNCY FOSTER. "I have neither born, married, nor died since 1905. In 1906 Governor Guild appointed me Surgeon-General, which position I still hold."

HAROLD NORTH FOWLER. "Since the last report I have published one book in collaboration with James R. Wheeler and Gorham Phillips Reeves: 'A Handbook of Greek Archaeology' (American Book Co., 1909, 559 pp., 12mo, illustrated). I have published also the following articles: 'The Ancient Bronze Chariot in the Metropolitan Museum,' the Chatauquan, September, 1905, pp. 50-55; Review of Wright's 'Greek Literature,' Classical Philology, 1908, pp. 217 f.; Review of 'Tebtunis Papyri, Part II,' ibid., 1908, pp. 96, 97; 'Thomas Day Seymour, in Memoriam,' American Journal of Archaeology, 1908, pp. 1, 2; 'Charles Eliot Norton, in Memoriam,' ibid., 1908, pp. 396-398; 'John Henry Wright, in Memoriam,' ibid., 1909, pp. 1, 2; Review of Walden's 'The Universities of Ancient Greece,' Classical Weekly, February 5, 1910; Review of W. Warde Fowler's 'Social Life at Rome in the Age of Cicero,' Classical Philology, 1910, pp. 235 f.; Review of Tarbell's "Catalogue of Bronzes, etc., in the Field Museum of Natural History," ibid., p. 243. Since the Summer of 1906 I have been editor in chief of the American Journal of Archaeology. In 1908 my wife and I spent the summer in Spain and Southern France, with a fortnight in Switzerland and some days in Paris and London. It was for both of us, I think, the happiest summer of our lives. On the 18th of February, 1909, my wife had a stroke of apoplexy, after which she never recovered consciousness. She died August 18, 1909. Since then I have been doing the work I have had to do and have been trying, with perhaps a fair measure of success, to get my shattered nerves into working order. My address is still: College for Women, Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio."

HENRY GARDNER FRENCH. Died January 2, 1892. (See Report, V, p. 32.)

EUGENE FULLER. "I am still actively engaged in my profession. It is my habit each year to take a vacation of about two months. This time is usually devoted to travel with my family. We often go to Europe, sometimes to the far West. A fair supply of professional honors has come in the last five years; among the recent ones was a commission in the United States Army in the Medical Reserve Corps, an honorary position, though, of course, in case of stress one might be called upon. I hardly expect to write more books, though every year I have published a number of articles in relation to my professional work. In these last years I have done some pioneer work in my specialty which, I am pleased to say, has attracted considerable professional attention. My children are as published in the last report. My oldest boy, Duncan, last year entered the Sheffield Scientific School."

FREDERIC GARDINER. Received degree of L.H.D. from St. John's College at Annapolis in 1911. Has made two trips abroad since last report. Youngest son graduated from Harvard in 1910 and is taking post graduate's course in architecture.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER GASTON. Reports no changes. Is President of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston, but still remains a member of his law firm of Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall.

JAMES GEDDES, JR. "The late revered Edward Everett Hale relates that when called upon for a few remarks and desirous of escaping the ordeal, he was in the habit of saying, 'There has been so much said and so well said that I will not occupy the time.' Perchance some of us, before attempting to meet the kindly request of our secretary with an equally kind reply, may be tempted to paraphrase the good old preacher's response, in order to have it apply to the exigency of the present case. But we would not wittingly frustrate the commendable purpose of our good secretary.

"Not having received from him any report on the thirtieth anniversary of the graduation of the Class of 1880, the impression somehow has become fixed in the mind of the writer that the twenty-fifth report was not only the last, but final, and possibly appropriately so. For what achievements has the average man to relate who has long passed beyond the mezzo del cammin di nostra vita and is already well on his way along the downward slope of life's journey? Nevertheless there may perhaps be some among us who have hitherto been so absorbed in the accumulation of the material and immaterial goods of this life as not to have had the leisure to relate their achievements until arriving at this fifth decade of their existence. Indeed it is true that some of the class have been so busy making history that they have not had time to write it. Possibly those of us who are still automatically 'going through the motions' of thirty years may be pardoned if we reply 'Nothing new to report.' But how about those who years ago were privileged to retire from active service and have had from so striking a vantage point such an opportunity of witnessing the fray? I have never forgotten the recorded observation of a classmate whose privilege it was to retire only ten years after graduating, 'having reached a point in the accumulation of property that satisfied me.' What could such classmates not tell us about 'reciprocity,' 'arbitration,' 'equal suffrage,' and all the other world movements? While trusting to have the pleasure of reading such philosophic reflections in our secretary's next report, it may now be in order to comply with some of his requests. To the first three questions a somewhat general negation may answer. Nevertheless, fain would I not omit a local attention received at the hands of the Boston University students—the dedication to me, together with a poem, of their 1911 'Hub,'; for so delicate attention from the student body touches me in a tender spot. As to question No. 4, about appearing in print, I have appeared in print in a scientific work in Germany, because it is cheaper to appear in that form there than here; in an occasional text-book between long intervals; in a pamphlet entitled 'Educational Advantages for American Students Abroad,' a second edition of which was reprinted from an educational Review. It is considered worthy of mention here because extracts from it were quoted in the Budget général de l'exercice 1911, a document placed in the hands of every French senator and representative. As regards 'offices of trust,' I am reminded in this connection that a Swiss writer, Töpffer, states that we all have a germ which never miscarries at any age. When it ceases to thrive you may be sure that the man has ceased to exist; it is that of vanity. The 'trusts,' fond legacies of my early days in Trieste, I have held for a number of years, and which this germ prompts me to note here to the disadvantage of those not noted, are: Treasurer of the Benevolent Aid Society for Italian Immigrants (subsidized by the Italian Government); Secretary and Treasurer of the Library of Modern Italian Literature; President of the Circolo Italiano di Boston; Vice-President of the Alliance-Française Groupe de Boston-Cambridge. These activities have given me the opportunity of meeting a number of distinguished foreigners, as well as many others not so distinguished, but no less interesting. Sympathy towards every member of the Class of 1880 becomes mellow as the years go by."

JOSEPH HENRY GEST. "There is not much to add to my preceding report. As to vital statistics, they have passed on to the next generation. On the 29th of September, 1909, my daughter Susanne was married to Philip Hinkle of Cincinnati. On the 15th of January, 1911, Philip, Jr., put me over into the third quarter. Of possible interest to you biographically: President of the Harvard Club of Cincinnati, 1907-8; member of Council of the Associated Harvard Clubs, 1908. My occupation continues the same: Director of the Cincinnati Museum Association in charge of the administration of the Museum and of the Art Academy, and Secretary of the Board of Trustees; Trustee and Secretary of the Municipal Art Society of Cincinnati; and as Vice-President of the Rockwood Pottery Company actively engaged in the designing and making of architectural faience for the permanent color decoration of buildings. Much time since the preceding report has been devoted to solving the mysteries of golf, working down to an 8 handicap, enjoying for two years the agreeable task of handicapping the Club, and now, as a member of the Green Committee, responsible for the weather, the turf, and all other conditions that prevent men 'playing their game.' There you are! With the old report and the above, your shears and paste pot can cut and string together what you think worth while."

SAMUEL COTTON GILBERT. Died April 3, 1885. (See Report III, p. 45; Report IV, p. 37.)

FRANK MILTON GILLEY. "There is nothing to report."

BRADLEY GILMAN. "In 1905 I removed with my wife and daughter from Springfield, Mass., to Canton, Mass., where I now reside, being the minister of the First Congregational Church of this town. In addition to my regular duties I find time for miscellaneous library work and for lectures. I have published a few stories in magazines, notably Scribner's and St. Nicholas, and have published two or three books of juvenile pictures. I have given considerable time to various reforms and have been especially connected with Dr. Booker T. Washington's work; for three years I have been a 'Lecturer' for the American Peace Society. I have travelled in Europe and Northern Africa twice since 1905. My only 'trophy' (unlike Roosevelt's long list) brought home from my last trip was an 'African fever,' but I could not give that to the Smithsonian. Thus I dole out my little news items, reluctantly; but I shall be selfishly eager to hear about the other 'fellows.' I wonder if they find this 'growing old' as 'queer' as do I; interesting, but queer: this identifying, by close contact, prints along the journey which one has read about, long before. Holmes' 'Last Leaf' reads differently now. Yet my life was never fuller of interests and activities than now."

WILLIAM WALLACE GOOCH. "No changes."

LOUIS MAY GREELEY. "Member of Executive Committee of Legislative League."

GEORGE GRISWOLD. "Nothing new to report. Best regards."

HENRY ELIOT GUILD. Died March 21, 1888. (See Report IV, p. 40.)

ARTHUR HALE. Continued in the service of the B. & O. as General Superintendent of Transportation until January 1, 1909. Since that date has been General Agent of the American Railway Association. In November, 1906, was made Chairman of Committee on Car Efficiency of above association. This committee and the Committee on Car Service have been merged as the Committee on Relation between the Railroads; Hale continues as chairman. Since January, 1907, Chairman of the American Railway Clearing House; continues Chairman of the Arbitration Committee. Was (in June, 1910) delegate to International Railway Congress which met at Berne, Switzerland. Then made first European trip travelling in France and England; second trip, 1911. Lived in Washington till 1909; is now in New York, but has another office in Chicago.

ARTHUR LAWRENCE HALL. "In October, 1907, I was knocked out by the panic, and after recovering from that I was again put out of business by the criminal failure of a New York brokerage firm. For two years past my health has been improving — due in part to allowing myself to be persuaded by a twelve-year-old boy to go in swimming too often and stay in too long. My old liking for boating, fishing, and shooting revived, and now I am well and hopeful."

FREDERIC BOUND HALL. "The printed items are correct. I passed ten months of a Sabbatical Year travelling in Europe. I was one of three Harvard men at the opening of 'Harvard House' in Stratford-on-Avon, October 6, 1909. At Rome I was the first member of the class to greet Roosevelt on his return to civilization, April 4, 1910."

WILLIAM DUDLEY HALL. "No change."

ARTHUR LEE HANSON. "No changes. Still living at South Eliot, Maine."

MITCHELL HARRISON. Is living winters in Washington, D. C., and summers at Vint Hill Farm, Nokesville, Virginia.

ALBERT BUSHNELL HART. "In answer to your appeal of June 1st, various things have happened to me and mine since 1905. In the University I was made in 1909 Eaton Professor of the Science of Government, being the chair held by A. Lawrence Lowell up to the time of his becoming President. This means very little alteration of college work, but a shift of interest, particularly as a new Department of Government has been set off out of the Department of History. I received the degree of LL.D. from Tufts College in 1905 and from Western Reserve University in 1907. In 1909 I was the delegate of Harvard University at the 350th anniversary of the University of Geneva, and was made Litt.D. of that University.

"Since 1905 I have completed the editorial work of 'The American Nation: A History,' which is a cooperative history of the United States in twenty-seven volumes. Having long been interested in the South, and having made many trips, longer or shorter, in that section, I set out in 1908 on a journey through the rural portions of the South, starting from Texas and coming out in North Carolina, after describing a line about a thousand miles long through the back hill country, by river navigation, in vehicles of every kind, sometimes spending a night with farmers or poor whites, and including the Sea Islands. The results of this journey, combined with previous experiences, were set forth in a series of letters to the Boston Transcript; afterward recast into a series of eight Lowell Lectures; and then restated and amplified in a book published in 1910 under the title of 'The Southern South.' Under Sabbatical leave of absence from the University I started from Cambridge in June, 1908, for a journey around the world. After some months on the Pacific Coast, including a trip to Alaska, we sailed for Japan and spent three months in that country and about two months in China; I also made a visit to the Philippine Islands, and then proceeded by North German Lloyd steamer, with a month's stay in Ceylon, to Egypt, and thence to Europe. In Japan I lectured at the Imperial University, at Keio Gijiku University, and elsewhere. I visited the Great Wall, Pekin, crossed overland to Hankow, and down the Yangtse River. The experiences of this round the world journey were set forth in about thirty letters to the Boston Transcript, which were afterwards gathered and recast into a book 'The Obvious Orient,' published in 1911. Besides the general interest of the East I met a number of Harvard men, dining with Harvard Clubs at Tokyo and Manila, where I found fourteen of my former students, including the then Vice-Governor, subsequently Governor-General Forbes. Notwithstanding experience on more than twenty ships, steaming many thousand miles in seas reputed stormy, we never saw rough weather in the whole journey. This year, 1911, I have been designated by the University as Exchange Professor to four Western colleges—Knox, Grinnell, Beloit, and Colorado—and shall spend the second half year in that service."

GEORGE BAPTISTE HATCH. "Your memory-jogger just came. I was on the point of saying to you 'Not guilty,' but a faint voice from the Whisper-country suggested that I would do well to look in such a place before making denial. I looked, and am caught with the goods on me. I am contrite, and hasten to acknowledge that I am only four months behindhand; but that's not much farther than Yale was in the boat-race last June, and perhaps we may both 'ketch up' if the lamp holds out to burn. The most interesting things which have happened to me since the last report have happened to somebody else first, being things relating to folk who appear in my life, but not in my Class Report. Which is a way of saying that I am getting on, getting on, as I noticed was the case with several of the 'old boys' at the last reunion. However, I have moved since 1905; namely, in August, 1906, to Ware, Mass., where I am minister of the East Congregational Church. It is curious that this is about all that can go into a report, yet I have lived a whole lot since 1905, and if the fellows of this class were going to send in each his report on the real issues of life, I might have more to say. And wouldn't I like to have a document in which every man told his precise and inmost creed and philosophy, as deduced from his own living since 1880."

EDWARD SOUTHWORTH HAWES. "There's but little I have to report. I am still a teacher of Greek and Latin in the Polytechnic Preparatory School in Brooklyn, N. Y., but this year I am 'absent on leave' and am about to sail for Europe next Saturday, with my sisters, for a tour of Southern Europe and Egypt. I expect to return in time to see my classmates next June. I am writing, as you may have observed, from Sagamore Beach. Don't mix it up with Sagamore Hill. 'Tis a spot on Cape Cod Bay, near the northern end of the new canal. I am trying to make a little grass and a few flowers grow here summers on a patch of sand. Success to date, moderate."

HAROLD GOULD HENDERSON. "I have nothing to add to previous reports. My wife and boys are well and we plan to spend half our time at the farm and half at our city home 82½ Irving Place. My oldest boy, who is now twenty-three, is halfway through his course in Chemical Engineering at Columbia, having graduated from the Academic department two years ago. My other boy, aged sixteen, is still at school at Pomfret, but has passed his preliminary exams. at Columbia, for he too wants to go in for scientific work. They both have a bent for mathematics, which fills me with wonder."

GEORGE HIBBARD. Not heard from.

WILLIAM HENRY HILLS. "I have nothing to add to the 1905 report, excepting that I became a grandfather May 7, 1911, through the arrival at a cottage on the boulevard at Atlantic of seven pounds or so of humanity, now called Ruth Hills Hartwell. Grandfather and grandmother are both doing as well as could be expected. How many other grandfathers are there in the class? A special dais should be provided for us. My daughter Ruth was graduated at Radcliffe in the Class of 1910 and was married July 6, 1910, to William E. Hartwell, Jr., of the Harvard Class of 1906. My daughter Miriam will be graduated at Radcliffe this year in the Class of 1911. She has had the honor of being President of her class both in the Sophomore and in the Senior years. The only change in my occupation since 1905 has been some reduction of activities. My travels so far have been of the 'See America First' variety, but in September grandfather and grandmother are going to Switzerland, where they may climb the Matterhorn and crow.'

FLETCHER STEPHEN HINES. "Nothing to add to last report."

CHARLES AUSTIN HOBBS. "In 1906 I realized that my private tutoring, in addition to my school work, was a bigger load than I could carry. Accordingly, I gave up my school work, and for the last five years have been engaged in the work of a private tutor. My office is 10A

Fairfax Hall, Cambridge, and I am connected with the organization known as Manter Hall. Nothing exciting has happened to me."

FRANCIS MARION HOLDEN. Was the son of Artemas Rogers and Susan (Bates) Holden and was born at Boston, Mass., on February 6, 1858. He prepared for college at the Boston Latin School. After leaving college he entered the Harvard Medical School and received the degree of M.D. in June, 1884. He also received the degree of A.B. out of course in 1905. He spent several years in England travelling and studying medicine. On his return to America he settled in Philadelphia, which was afterwards his home. He entered the stock brokerage business and was for a time a member of the Philadelphia Exchange. He was also an officer of the Cataract Copper Mining and Smelting Company of Montana. He was a member of a number of the social clubs in Philadelphia, and also of the Philadelphia Historical Society and Franklin Institute. In 1907 Holden went to Paris to be with his wife and daughter, the latter of whom was studying there. He was intending to return to this country, but was taken suddenly ill on the afternoon of February 28, 1908. On his return to the hotel his illness excited alarm and a physician was called, but he lived only a few hours. The cause of his death was angina pectoris. Holden was married on January 3, 1888, to Emma Arndt Lombaert who, with his only child, a daughter, survive him.

WILLIAM HOOPER. "On October 1, 1908, I gave up my position as treasurer of the Boston Elevated Railway Co. and retired from business. In November of the same year, by the advice of her physician, I took my wife, who had been ill, abroad for a year's rest, and we did not return until June, 1910. During that time of rest and quiet I became involved in the relief of the sufferers of the earthquake in Sicily and Calabria; was in Paris during the flood in January, 1910; arrived in Brussels on the day that King Leopold died, and reached London two days after the death of King Edward. Lloyd C. Griscom, who was the American Ambassador in Rome at the time of the earthquake, organized an American Relief Committee and made me one of its members. For my poor services as a member of this committee I was made a 'Cavalier' of the Order of the Cross of Italy, being No. 1524 (series 2a), and received a medal of that order; also a diploma and a silver medal by decree of the King; also a silver medal from the Italian Red Cross Society. Our American Red Cross Society was also good enough to award me its silver 'medal of merit.' Since June, 1910, I have tried to lead a quiet life at home."

JOHN WESLEY HOUSTON. Not heard from. Is still a resident of New York, but spends a large part of the time in travel.

JAMES TORREY HOWE. Has not been heard from.

FRANK COLHOON HUIDEKOPER. Died July 26, 1890. (See Report IV, p. 48.)

ARTHUR HURST. Was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., on October 15, 1857. He was the son of Lewis and Mary Elizabeth (Mack) Hurst. He prepared for college at the Brooklyn Collegiate and Polytechnic Institute. After graduation he studied law in his father's office and was admitted to the Bar of New York in September, 1882. He continued in the practice of law in Brooklyn so long as his health permitted, and also acted as private secretary of Mr. Justice Blanchard, of the New York Supreme Court, whom he cherished as a warm friend. Hurst was an enthusiastic Harvard man and greatly enjoyed the reunion of the class on our twenty-fifth anniversary. He was a member of the University Club of Brooklyn, Marine and Field Club, Brooklyn Bar Association, and Midwood Club of Flatbush. His cheerfulness of manner concealed for a long time from his friends his long suffering from an obscure illness which finally drove him from active employment. An operation about a month before his death disclosed the fact that he was suffering from tuberculosis of the intestines, and although he rallied slightly, the end came on June 12, 1909. Hurst was married on April 27, 1892, to Theophila Marsh, who, with his daughter Theophila and son Arthur, Jr., survive him.

HENRY JACKSON. "Nothing of note to add."

LAURENCE HENRY HITCH JOHNSON. "Still practicing law in Boston, living most of the year in Milton, but for the summer months having a cottage at Edgartown, Mass."

HENRY CHAMPION JONES. "I think that I have nothing of interest to add to what was in the last report except that I have been living in Cambridge since the Autumn of 1906."

FREDERIC DOLBIER JORDAN. "I am practicing law at Joliet, Illinois. Office, 24-27 Young Building. Still a student. Acquire knowledge so slowly that no honor is yet due for any good done."

FRANCIS BOWLER KEENE. "My report of 1905 was written while I was still Consul at Florence, but about to accept reluctantly a promotion to Geneva."

"Promotion is supposed to be dear to the official soul; but, being peculiarly adapted to the post on the Arno, I felt very much as my better $\frac{9}{10}$ did. When asked how she liked the transfer, she replied: 'I'd rather be a red flannel petticoat hanging out of a back window in Florence than the finest jewelled watch on the quai in Geneva.'

"When my appointment to Florence was announced in 1903, the Boston Herald said that President Roosevelt's class at Harvard was a 'plum-trust.' The Milwaukee Sentinel paragraphically retorted: 'Wrong again. Mr. Keene is a peach, not a plum.' That was considered a good joke in those days. But it was no joke to me when the illustrious T. R. prematurely plucked me in 1905. I was a clingstone peach, and would have preferred to cling a while longer to the Florence branch.

“The order to take charge of the Geneva office came to me at a time when I had made my plans to be present at the twenty-fifth anniversary reunion of the class, the most brilliant Class Day of modern times. Permission was granted to absent myself from a busy office at the busiest season and go to the United States. But with me was transferred my ingrowing conscience, an admirable but painful disease. After many bouts of wrestling, that conscience finally took the strangle hold. Duty was done and pleasure renounced. For credit, see the Ledger of St. Peter rather than the Efficiency Record of the Department of State. On the day of that class dinner I cabled to the toast-master: ‘Absent by executive order.’ Not since 1886 have I seen Cambridge, and am likely to hold the record as an absentee.

“My ‘vital statistics’ remain the same, but I have made my peace with Roosevelt. No boys to send to Harvard, both of my boys being girls. But Harvard men of a later day may be interested. If it is the destiny of those girls to be married, we have been doing our best to make them the sort who will not only attract, but also permanently hold the right kind of American husbands. We desire no foreign sons-in-law. Long observation tends to confirm our opinion that, in the great majority of cases, the foreign husband of an American-born wife is apt to be lacking in certain essentials to marital happiness.

“My girls speak four languages, like their Daddy. To be polyglot is to be accomplished. But to be able to really think, to be well-informed, to have the ability to reason and converse with logical intelligence, are higher qualities, which the methods of the average foreign school for girls do not, it seems to me, develop as well as do the best schools at home. Hereabouts they seem to have no clear idea of the value of mathematics in the training of the logical faculty in the female mind, in the production of what we call persons of good judgment. If you want your girl to study algebra, you are told, with a shrug, that it is not taught in the school, and that you must make private arrangements for special tutoring.

“Switzerland, I think, stands at the head of the world’s class in reading and writing. Less than one per cent. of its population is illiterate. But this remarkable supremacy cannot be taken as a reliable index of the average breadth of mental vision. The Canton of Geneva devotes about one-third of its annual budget to education, but I noticed that my children were required to devote the whole of their first year in geography to the study of the map of this little city of 125,000 inhabitants. This doubtless lays firm foundations of local loyalty and produces fine messenger boys and cabmen, but —

“The bacillus of the Wanderlust is in my system, but official cares and duties are a specific. Three times in the past six years I have made business visits to the United States.

“Apropos of those visits, I must tell you a good story on myself. I respect those who enjoy jokes on themselves, and proper self-respect requires that I tell you this one on me.

“Two years ago, while in Milwaukee, I was at the Country Club. After a game of golf, I joined a group sitting over refreshing things that were wet, cost money, and some of which went to the head. Stories were told. I was reminded of one, as was natural to a man who has been accused of being the most prolific and inveterate storyteller in the Consular Service, doing it in four languages. Forgetful of the fact that I had long been living far away from the source of supplies, I began my tale. Presently I noticed a growing look of pain on the faces about me, and instantly realized that I was citing ancient history. I said: ‘I beg your pardon, fellows. I didn’t mean to repeat.’ From a table in the corner came a voice: ‘Well, Frank, Geneva has always been famous for its repeaters.’

“When the laughter that followed this sally had subsided, I announced my intention to export that joke and tell it at every opportunity.

“No, I have published no books. The conscientious Consul at Geneva has no time to write them. We leave the family fame in the keeping of Mrs. Keene’s younger sister, Ellen Churchill Semple, whom one of my nieces called her ‘sciented Aunt,’ and who has just given to the world her second work, ‘Influences of Geographic Environment.' As for me, I habitually keep out of print. For special occasions, and as a recreation, I write verse. My archives bulge with it. The only product of my Muse that has found its way into print in recent years was my tribute to Roosevelt, which appeared in the June, 1909, number of the Harvard Graduates Magazine.

"Verse writing is a gentle art, especially if the author takes care not to get into print. One distinction is mine, I have reason to believe. So far as I know, I am the only person who has ever written an ode to a pickled onion. Which reminds me of one of the countless original remarks of the lady who is my better $\frac{9}{10}$.

"Finding that Pegasus did not shy at a jar of pickled onions, when I wrote those lines to a lady friend who had discovered that I thought them toothsome, I sang the juicy joys of a can of maple syrup which that same lady sent to us. Pegasus did not need the curb. So I cantered him around a savory offering of baked pork and beans which the Rector's wife, a New England lady, once made for us. Here let me assure you that the consular family is self-sustaining, and that we do not have donation parties. Then came a request, from the lady of the pickled onions and the maple syrup, that I write for her, to the tune of 'America,' some verses on the turkey, to be sung by her guests on Thanksgiving Day. I did so, and was reliably informed that no digestion suffered.

"Later on, copies of all these productions were sent to a literary friend who had liked the turkey verses and wanted to see more of the sort. When Mrs. Keene read his amusing letter concerning them, she said: 'Why did you let him read those verses? He'll think you have a mental tapeworm.'

"I am married to a pronounced sulphite. She is the most original wife I ever had. Henry Watterson, one of her greatest admirers next to myself, said of her at the time of our marriage, which was a long while ago, that she had always been noted for a quality of wit that invariably hit centre at forty paces. Marse Henry is a discerning man.

"Consular life has given me much material of interesting and amusing experience, and I have often been urged to put some of these experiences into print. Perhaps. One of my predecessors here wrote the best consular stories ever written. But the cares of this office are greater than they were then.

"I am a Vestryman of Emmanuel Church, the American Episcopal Church in Geneva, the cornerstone of which was laid by General Grant on his tour of the world. I am also president of the business organization which holds the church property."

GEORGE REED KELLY. "The past five years have been uneventful with one exception. That exception is my marriage, which occurred on April 25, 1911. Mrs. Kelly was born in Cardiff, Wales, on January 2, 1883. Her maiden name was Margaret Maguire. Her father was William Maguire, who was born in Stranreer, Scotland. Her mother, born Mary Devonshire, came from Devon, England. I am at present living at Manchester, Massachusetts, and am still engaged in the window glass business in Boston."

THADDEUS DAVIS KENNESON. "I must have received your circular of June 1, but I was so busy up to August 7 finishing a collection of Cases on Trusts that I doubtless laid it aside and forgot it. I am living still at 125 W. 47th Street, New York City, and that is my address. I gave up practice of law the fall after I saw you. I have never fully recovered my strength and never shall. I commenced my teaching October 1, 1909, and am still able to do my duties as professor, not, however, without much effort at times. I have briefs to make occasionally for friends. No offices and no honors have come my way since I last reported."

PERCY KENT. "I am still plodding along in the same business and live at the same address and lead a quiet, uneventful life. My family all enjoy good health and we have a fair share of this world's goods. Therefore I can not complain."

HENRY WHITMAN KILBURN. "On May 27, 1906, I resigned my position as Ophthalmic Surgeon to the Carney Hospital, and was unanimously elected to the position of Consulting Ophthalmic Surgeon. This step was necessitated by the fact that I was obliged to live out of town on account of my wife's poor health. January, 1911, I was elected Vice-President of the New England Ophthalmological Society. I have made several trips in Canada, on one occasion going to the Pacific coast, and then returning via California and Colorado. February, 1911, I spent in Jamaica, B. W. I."

JOHN LAMSON LAMSON. Died April 6, 1897. (See Report VI, p. 51.)

ARTHUR HENRY LEA. "In reply to your circular, let me say that since the last report my life has run on in just the same lines, and I have nothing either to add or subtract."

WILLIAM POLLOCK LEARNED. Not heard from.

JAMES LOUIS LESTER. "I am in excellent health and have been very busy during the last year, mostly teaching, although I have done some law business."

EDWARD HARRIS LUM. "There is really nothing to add to my report of six years ago — no change except my bald spot is a little larger. I can still stick fast to the back of a broncho, but have my hands full when hit by a sixty horse power auto. The 'honors,' 'travels,' etc., are in reserve for my old age." "P. S. I beg his pardon, I have another son."

CHARLES DUDLEY MARCH. Died December 24, 1887. (See Report IV, p. 55.)

GEORGE WHITE MERRILL. "I am continuing my work for the Old South Church and Society in various clerical and administrative ways." Has recently changed his residence from Boston to Jamaica Plain.

GEORGE PASSAROW MESSERVY. "The only one thing of importance I am aware of is the writing of my obituary. I am sometimes fearful that I may not live to see it edited — I presume if I am the sole survivor of the class there would be no impropriety of bringing out the advanced sheet of it. Mrs. Messervy and I go to England for the stag hunting on the 21st, so regret I shall not see you Commencement."

ANDREW MILLER. "I do not exactly know what questions you wish me to answer, but I can say that I am still plodding along with LIFE; considerably older and probably none the wiser. If there are any facts that you wish in connection with my existence, I will be glad to furnish them if you will ask the question. I seem to be in moderately good health and the paper is very prosperous, and I hope you are doing well yourself."

ARTHUR WENDELL MOORS. "I still live in Boston, where I conduct a foreign banking business, in which occupation I have been engaged for the past thirty years. I am apt to visit Europe nearly every other year, combining business with pleasure. I took a European trip in the Spring of 1907 and again in the Spring of 1909. On the latter trip I had as a companion our classmate, Bishop, and we had 'a bully time.' I am and have been for a number of years a director in various charitable and kindred organizations in Boston. I take considerable interest in music and belong to several musical clubs. I am still a bachelor, one of the very few in the class."

CHARLES MORGAN. Was born in New York City on October 3, 1857. He was the son of Henry and Mary Cornelia (Pell) Morgan. He prepared for college at Harrow and London, Ontario. After graduation he was engaged for a time in stock farming at New Warlabby, Bordentown, New Jersey, where he continued to live until 1889, when he went abroad. He lived at Pau until 1897, and then removed to Dinard, France, where he lived for several years. He then returned to New York, which was his residence until his death on May 14, 1908. He had been ill for a number of months with a complication of diseases and was unconscious for a considerable time before his death. Morgan was never engaged in active business. He was married on March 14, 1882, to Clara Woodward, and she and his three sons survive him.

SANFORD MORISON. Is still connected with the Memphis Artesian Water Department, of which he has been Secretary since 1907. "Since the last report I have been innocent of 'travelling far and wide' or of publishing books or of appearing before the public in other than my business capacity. I look forward with pleasure to the promised report, for as the years go by it is interesting to note how an occasional dark horse lengthens his stride and makes a better finish than he did start."

EDWARD IRVING MORSE. "Nothing alarming has happened in my life since the last report. I am at present, outside of my business, a director in the People's National Bank of the city and chairman of the Board of Auditors of the Marlborough Savings Bank. Last year I was elected for the third year President of the Union Club of the city, the leading and oldest gentlemen's social club."

CHARLES HENRY MORSS. Left Medford in 1909 to assume same position, superintendent of schools, in Portland, Maine. Since last report has travelled extensively in the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Mexico to Canada; edited for Houghton, Mifflin & Co. an illustrated school edition of Scudder's Fables and Folk Stories; is member of the Twentieth Century and New England Botanical Clubs of Boston; in October, 1912, became a partner of the firm of Cheney, Smith & Co., mercantile brokers at San Juan, Puerto Rico, whence he writes: "The Wanderlust has finally brought me to this delectable island, where I intend to make my home for some time."

DAVID MOULD. "I continued the practice of the law in Sioux City, Iowa, as a member of the firm of Marks and Mould until October 1, 1906. At that time I was appointed Judge of the District Court of the Fourth Judicial District by Governor Cummings to fill a vacancy, having been previously nominated for the following regular term by a Judicial Convention. I have occupied the position ever since. I am now serving my second regular term. The district is comprised of eight counties in the northwest corner of the States. The Court has original unlimited jurisdiction in all cases in law, equity, and probate. The work is varied, sometimes strenuous, but on the whole I enjoy it."

AUSTIN KENT MUZZEY. Is still living in Utica. His wife died on July 4, 1911.

THOMAS WHITE NICKERSON. "Since the last report I have made one long journey to the countries about the Mediterranean (1905-1906) and a short trip to England (1910). My work has been the same and the only new offices received are those of President of the Standing Committee of the Diocese of Western Massachusetts, and delegate from the Diocese to two General Conventions of the Episcopal Church." Mrs. Nickerson died on October 5, 1911.

CHARLES PHELPS NORTON. "I am unmarried; am practicing law; am the Chancellor of the University of Buffalo, a university consisting of departments of medicine, law, pharmacy, and dentistry, to which I have been endeavoring to have added a department of letters and sciences." Norton is intensely interested in the matter of education, especially of the incoming foreign population, and has been prominent in the attempt to provide a free college in Buffalo.

WILLIAM FRANCIS O'CALLAGHAN.

William Francis O'Callaghan was born at Milford, Mass., March 27, 1856, and was the son of William and Ellen (Flynn) O'Callaghan. His early education was obtained in the schools of Milford; but in those days the Milford High School hardly enabled a student to pass the Harvard examinations, and Mr. O'Callaghan, in company with William F. Sheehan and Daniel W. Moriarty, went from Milford to Exeter to complete their preparation. He entered Harvard College in 1876, and remained the entire four years, graduating with the class in 1880. He was a genial associate, fond of mingling with his fellows, a lover of bright conversation, and withal a devoted student. He approached his work with determination, and whilst not possessing qualities — which to a large extent may be superficial — that enable a student to win honors in his classes, yet he mastered the subjects that made up his course. During the last three years of his college life he was a very successful private tutor, and at graduation he adopted the profession of teaching, after a brief attendance at the Law School. In 1883 he commenced teaching in New York City, and he continued teaching in that city until his death. He died from the effects of a fall on the ice, January 24, 1912. In 1882 Mr. O'Callaghan married Mary T. McGinnis of Belmont. She lived but a few years, and her premature death was an affliction from which he did not soon recover. Afterwards, in 1887, he married Delia Haly, who survives him with a son and three daughters. Those of his classmates who saw Mr. O'Callaghan at the twenty-fifth anniversary of graduation in 1905 must have been impressed by the very great change that twenty-five years had brought about in his appearance, — a change showing the development of power and a life that had been lived according to correct standards. He had lost nothing of his youthful jollity. His best qualities had survived a quarter of a century's contact with the world, embellished and strengthened by a Christian life.

J. A. O'K.

JOHN ALOYSIUS O'KEEFE. "Two of my sons have graduated from Harvard College, and the third is one of the first eight in 1912. Am still practicing law in Lynn; was Chairman of the Committee that framed the new Commission Government for Lynn."

LEONARD ECKSTEIN OPDYCKE. "Year after year my winters have been spent in New York, and with the exception of a trip to England and Scotland in 1910, my summers in Bar Harbor. I have been well — busy — happy. While somewhat diverse, my occupations usually have more or less to do with "uplift." They have, at least, two good results:— that of bringing me in pleasant contact with others, often classmates, engaged similarly; and that of stimulating a belief in the present as better than the past, and in the future as certain to be better than the present. In the work of betterment it is a privilege to have a share, however slight."

CHARLES ALBERT PARKER.

Charles Albert Parker was born at Boston on October 27, 1858, and was the son of John Brooks and Annie Bartlett (Hall) Parker. He prepared for college at Noble's School in Boston. He was always a man of retiring disposition and in college as in after life, although he had many acquaintances, made few intimate friends. He was fond of out of door sports. Some will remember the meeting of the Harvard Athletic Association at Beacon Park in 1879, where Parker won the three mile bicycle race which was ridden on the old-fashioned high wheels. Cabot in writing of this event in which he also took part, says: "It was characteristic of him that most of our training was done together, and that from the very beginning he made no secret of the way in which he intended to ride the race — trailing until the last half mile and then making a spurt — which was precisely the way that he won. It impressed me then with the fairness of the man, and this impression lasted through all my intercourse with him, which was until he left the First Corps of Cadets." After graduation Parker went into the banking business and was for several years with the firm of Potter, Lovell & Company of Boston. After that he was engaged in no business, and most of his time was occupied with out of door activities. He was fond of shooting and fishing. Even in college he was intensely interested in military matters. He was an excellent rifle shot and an early member of the Massachusetts Rifle Association, the pioneer society of that nature in this part of the country. Parker was also for many years a member of the First Corps of Cadets, the "crack" Corps in Massachusetts, and in this organization reached the rank of First Sergeant. Of this part of his life Cabot writes: "My remembrance of him in the First Corps is of a man who, while sometimes lacking the ability to control himself, was gifted with a singular control of others, which he exercised in a manner which has left a very sweet memory among his old comrades." Parker's last years were clouded with a complication of illnesses. Among other troubles was the fear he had of a mental disease with which other members of his family had been afflicted. This kept him more solitary than he had been before, and he saw few people during the last years of his life. In this latter period he was under the care of our classmate Barstow, whose death must have been a hard blow to him. Parker himself died soon after, on October 11, 1910. J. W.

WILLIAM GEORGE PELLEW. Died February 18, 1892. (See Report V, p. 58.)

JAMES LANE PENNYPACKER. "Nothing new. I am an 'Advisory Manager of the Free Museum of Science and Art' at the University of Pennsylvania, which is hardly worth mentioning."

ARTHUR PERRY. "No changes."

GEORGE MURDOCK PERRY. "Nothing to report under statistics, I am sorry to say. As regards other matters of personal history, I changed my residence in 1909 from Ashland, Mass., to Holden, Mass. I have had no regular position since 1905, but have done a certain amount of library work. I am engaged in rural pursuits to some extent and taking some part in the activities of the town. Beyond this I do not recall anything of sufficient importance to repeat."

HERBERT MILLS PERRY. Died May 8, 1898. (See Report VI, p. 58.)

GEORGE GORHAM PETERS. "No marriages. Trips up the Nile and through Sicily; also one to Straits of Ma-gellan and to the American ports. Rest of time shooting, fishing, and playing golf: in fact, a thoroughly useless existence, but a happy one."

WILLIAM ANDREWS PEW. Since last report has been commissioned Brigadier General Massachusetts Militia (February 29, 1908) and assigned to command Second Brigade.

ERNEST HENRY PILSBURY. "1905, December 12, at Brooklyn, New York, E. H. Pilsbury to Marie A. Jadwin of Brooklyn. 1906, Elected member of Board of Trustees of the Brevoort Savings Bank of Brooklyn. 1907-8, Lectured before Junior Class of Adelphi College, Brooklyn, on Law of Real Property and Law of Wills and Decedents Estates. 1908, Visited Arizona, Southern California, and San Francisco. 1910, Moved office to 32 Park Place, New York City, which is my present address."

WESLEY FRANK PRICE. "Since our last report I have moved from Files Valley, Tex. to Napton, Mo. I have been quietly pursuing the duties and privileges of my profession. Nothing worthy of note has taken place in my life unless a constant desire to make it better is worthy of mentioning. I greatly rejoice in the honors and achievements of my classmates."

JOSIAH QUINCY. Not heard from. Is a member of Boston Transit Commission. Was married November 1, 1905, to Mary, daughter of Samuel R. Honey, of New York.

HARRY SEATON RAND. "Occupation and residence same as in June, 1905. Married, November 24, 1909, to Mabel Rena Mawhinney."

FREDERICK JORDAN RANLETT. "Possibly I might make an interesting story of my life during the last six years, but it would be an awful strain on my imagination. Your account of me in the last Class Report seems reasonably free from extenuation and from malice. Brought down to date by ditto marks, it will doubtless stand as a definite biography."

WALTER HORTON RHETT. Died October 4, 1893.
(See Report V, p. 64.)

WILLIAM KING RICHARDSON. "Since June, 1905, I have continued the practice of law. At the present time I belong to the firm of Fish, Richardson, Herrick & Neave, with offices at 84 State Street, Boston, and 5 Nassau Street, New York. In winter I live at 306 Beacon Street, Boston, and in summer at Nahant, Mass., where I have been somewhat active in town politics. I have travelled in Europe during each summer vacation, and have visited the Balkan provinces and other rather remote parts. I have written nothing but a large number of briefs and am still unmarried."

FRANK BLAIR ROLLINS. Died February 24, 1884.
(See Report III, p. 68.)

THEODORE ROOSEVELT. "Since June, 1905, I finished my term as President. I then, in March, 1909, went to Africa and spent a year there, hunting and travelling and collecting in the interests of the National Museum at Washington. I left Africa about the 1st of April, and after a little over two months in Europe, returned to America. I am now Associate Editor of the Outlook and thoroughly enjoy my work. I am living at my own home, Sagamore Hill, Oyster Bay, Long Island, New York, and I doubt whether I have ever been happier or enjoyed myself more than during the past year." (Since the above letter was written Roosevelt has again entered political life and was the candidate of the Progressive Party for the office of President.)

EUGENE DEXTER RUSSELL. "Still at the same stand, the Lynn Classical High School, improving with age and still blessed with all the essentials of rational existence.

My latest title is grandpa, but the title would fit the little sinner who thrust it on me almost as gracefully as it does me. My interests are still educational, and as I have not yet learned how to decline office convincingly, I am keeping better men out of several honorable offices of some educational distinction. I am also Vice-President of the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston."

RICHARD MIDDLECOTT SALTONSTALL. "My oldest boy, Leverett, is in college, a member of the class graduating in June, 1914. He is taking quite an active interest in athletic sports, but not sufficiently for any special mention in this respect. For the last five years I have been one of the Directors of the Harvard Alumni Association, and am still a member of the firm of Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall, engaged in the active practice of law here in Boston. I do not see that there is anything else I have done which would be of special interest to my classmates."

CHESTER FRANKLIN SANGER. Died October 14, 1891. (See Report V, p. 68.)

HENRY WILSON SAVAGE. "First, my apologies. I have taken six months to try to dig up something that would be of interest to you and my classmates, with a result that is not wholly successful. I am still endeavoring to combine a minimum of entertainment to the American public with a maximum gain to myself, although said public often reverses in form and gets a whole lot of entertainment for itself with very little profit to me! In addition to my lighter productions intended solely for amusement, like 'The Merry Widow,' 'The College Widow,' 'Excuse Me,' 'The Million,' and 'Little Boy Blue,' I have continued to undertake some serious work, including 'Everywoman,' 'Madame X,' and the grand operas "Parsifal,' 'Madam Butterfly," and "The Girl of the Golden West " in English. In this way I have tried to gain the interest of the public in grand opera in the vernacular, whenever possible giving first consideration and always every encouragement to native voices. For singers and novelties I usually visit Europe twice yearly, keeping in touch with all that is of value in music and the drama, and for pleasure have extended my trips to Egypt and Turkey. No books bear my imprint as author, and with the exception of the presidency of the National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers, no office of public trust has been conferred on me, unless we take into consideration the idea of the embryo playwrights and composers, that the theatrical or operatic manager or producer is simply a trustee of public funds for the exploitation of novelties."

HENRY RUSSELL SHAW. Died September 6, 1904. (See Report VII, p. 56.)

THORNTON HOWARD SIMMONS. "Nothing doing."

SAMUEL WIGGINS SKINNER. Died May 20, 1901. (See Report VII, p. 57.)

FREDERICK MEARS SMITH. "Occupation and residence unchanged and haven't done anything worth writing about."

WALTER ALLEN SMITH. Died April 8, 1882. (See Report II, p. 73.)

WILLIAM STANFORD STEVENS. "Residence the same. Family the same. Occupation still that of a 'retired' 'man of affairs' — travelling half the time, but in no un-beaten tracks."

VANDERLYNN STOW. "You know what happened to San Franciscans after 1905. Earthquake, fire, broke, and a word of sympathy from your dear self. I have made a trip to Europe since 1905. I have not changed my occupation nor my residence. I have not published any books nor appeared in print. I have not held any public offices. I am President of the Thomas Day Company, a manufacturing concern located in San Francisco, also President of the San Francisco Institute of Art, a Trustee of the Leland Stanford Jr. University, and a Director in the Savings Union Bank of San Francisco."

FRANK OVERTON SUIRE. "So far as I have been concerned, the changes have been few and your questions must be answered in the negative, unless it might be of interest that I have been for some time the first Vice-President of the Cincinnati Bar Association and recently elected a Director of the Central Trust and Safe Deposit Co., and have continued to practice law with reasonable success, coupled with an unreasonable amount of labor."

WILLIAM HOUSTON TALBOTT. Died April 9, 1894. (See Report VI, p. 65.)

ARTHUR TAYLOR. "I am still practicing law in Boston, my business being 53 State St. and my residence Commonwealth Hotel, Boston."

WILLIAM GEORGE LANGWORTHY TAYLOR.

LAUSANNE, SWITZERLAND
August 11, 1911

"MY DEAR WOODBURY,—I took a run down to Geneva a couple of days ago. Turning over the leaves of Baedeker I stumbled upon this: 'American Consul: Francis B. Keene.' I immediately supplied 'Bowler,' and as soon as I reached the pier went right up to the pleasant consulate, and I can assure you was received with heartiness. From our national representative I learned that a call had been issued from your headquarters for new data for a class report. It is no wonder my notice did not reach me, for I have complained so much at unnecessary mail (always a surtax) that folks at home are cautious about sending on. Since 1905 I apparently was pegging along about as I had been previously, always thinking I was 'doing better' in health and work, until, at the end of February, 1910, I had an attack of palpitation of the heart that caused me precipitately to throw my work onto my overworked colleagues and seek the balmy clime of San Antonio, Texas. Coming back to Lincoln at the end of March, I gave one lecture, the results of which convinced me that the ways of the pedagogue were no longer for me. I at once formed plans for a prolonged tour or residence abroad. The house was let to a sorority; the furniture and books were packed in the barn—a task of a couple of months; the ‘live stock’ was disposed of or otherwise arranged for, and we reached Boston in time for me to attend the 1910 reunion of 1880. The result of a year’s residence abroad is the conviction that my heart is all right. The stomach was used up, or appeared to be; but all that any stomach needs is a little will power. The will works wonders on the stomach; but it can’t cure a weak heart. Lausanne is the finest stopping place I know of. My little son is at a school, or rather outdoor camp on the lake; and I frequently row along the shore to his place. I had, not long ago, frightful pains of indigestion in my stomach, but a little work with dumb-bells has cured all that. Last winter was spent in Paris, near the Luxembourg Gardens. I paid some attention to the French language, which I have always been somewhat conversant with. We shall spend next winter in Germany, perhaps at Freiburg-im-Breisgau. It is even possible that we spend a third year abroad, ‘bathing in’ Italian also. But we have limited our expatriation to 1913. I don’t care to spend a life of ‘unalloyed pleasure.’ Sooner or later I want to live and die casting my lot in among the rest for better or for worse in my own country, which I love the better the more I pick flaws.”

*JOHN SEVER TEBBETS. Died January 19, 1901.
(See Report VII, p. 62.)

JOHN JACOB THOMSEN. Not heard from.

WALTER CHECKLEY TIFFANY. Gave up law practice in 1907. Since then has been managing editor of the Northwestern Miller and associate editor of the Bellman of Minneapolis, Minn.

HOWARD TOWNSEND. "As for my record, I still live in New York. Our summer home is at Southampton, Long Island. I am still at the Bar, but, being a member of the Committee on Character appointed by the Supreme Court to pass on the fitness and character of applicants for admission to the Bar, and being the Chairman of the Committee of the Bar Association having to do with the disbarment of lawyers who have misconducted themselves, I have practically withdrawn from general practice. My daughter Sophia and I spent a delightful three months in Italy in 1909. I have published nothing. Lately I have been one of a committee to persuade our Court of Appeals to lengthen from three to four years the period of study required of those who wish to be admitted to the New York Bar. We succeeded in the spring of 1911."

RICHARD TRIMBLE. "No matters of interest to record."

FREDERIC ALLISON TUPPER. "In 1906 I was elected President of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association and was reelected in 1907. For several years I have been a trustee of the Boston Teachers' Retirement Fund Association. I am also a trustee of the Boston Teachers' Pension Fund. In 1905 I published in the Boston Transcript 'Genealogical Notes on the Tupper Family.' In 1906 appeared my pamphlet entitled 'A Retirement Fund for Teachers.' In 1909 I was Phi Beta Kappa poet at Tufts College, and read some verses entitled 'The Golden Carillon.' I was made an honorary member of the Delta Chapter of Massachusetts, of Phi Beta Kappa, Tufts College, 1909. 'The Golden Carillon' was published in the Tufts College Graduate for July, 1909. In 1910 I wrote the prologue for the 1915 Pageant. Since 1899 I have been Headmaster of the Brighton High School, Boston."

BRADFORD STRONG TURPIN. "Nothing at all to report that is of interest to the class."

JOHN LATHROP WAKEFIELD. "In the Summer of 1906 I became a director and associate counsel of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston, and as I found the business of the company required all my time, I withdrew from the firm of Rand, Vinton & Wakefield, which was soon dissolved. I am still with the insurance company and have relieved the routine of regular work by business trips to various parts of the country and by two vacations abroad. I am still living in Dedham, Mass., and my business address is 178 Devonshire St., Boston."

CHARLES WARE. "Nothing of interest has happened to me since 1905. I am living in Princeton, Mass., on a small farm, working hard and enjoying life."

CHARLES EVERETT WARREN. "First and foremost, I have three children, who of course are the finest in town. Every other parent in the neighborhood says so — of their own. The names of these hale and hearty children of mine are: Marguerite Imelda Warren, born at Hyde Park, August 30, 1901; Charles Joseph Warren, born at North Easton, January 9, 1906; Dorothy Exilda Warren, born at North Easton, February 13, 1908. Marguerite wishes she could go to Harvard, where she could learn to be an artist and author, in both of which arts she shows precocity; Charles Joseph shows an aptitude for mechanical pursuits, chiefly pulling things to pieces at present, and he too is firmly decided that he will go to Harvard; and Dorothy is as yet undecided, but is in favor of running a candy shop. What I haven't done that I have been ambitious to do would be more voluminous than what I have done. When I was obliged to give up the active practice of medicine, owing to ill health, I hoped to be able to return again and take up the work anew, but time finds me still engaged in the by no means less arduous but less exacting field of literature, with ambition far greater than the fruition. Skirmishing more as a free lance than otherwise, I have written in a desultory manner upon medical subjects. I have a series entitled 'In the Twilight' now appearing in the Medical Fortnightly of St. Louis, which the editor informs me will be run as long as I will supply copy. I also have a series of articles appearing in the Therapeutic Record of Louisville. I have done some newspaper work, chiefly special and syndicate work. A number of articles have also appeared in Popular Mechanics. And I might add 'pot boilers' too insignificant to mention. 'Me and the family' live the simple life here, sometimes simpler than we like, but the nearness to the heart of nature makes amends for such privations as a country life must of necessity involve. The freedom and health which we enjoy has made me an enthusiastic missionary in the 'back to the land' cause, which is somewhat of a hobby with me as a solution for some of the many social evils of the day from the overcrowding of cities and depletion of the country."

CHARLES GRENFILL WASHBURN. "Have never overcome that natural modesty which so completely blighted my life in college. The dates you seek are an unexpired term in the 59th Congress and served in the 60th and 61st Congresses."

HENRY RANDALL WEBB. Engaged in the practice of law in Washington, D. C. Member of the Cosmos and Chevy Chase Clubs. Assistant Treasurer of the Society of the Cincinnati. Vice-President of the Society of the Cincinnati of Maryland. President of the Society of the War of 1812, in the District of Columbia. Secretary of the Laymen's Association of Saint John's Church. Secretary of the Law Reporter Printing Company.

ALBERT BARNES WEIMER. Was in Europe in the Summers of 1905, '08 '09 and '10. Was married on June 12, 1910, to Ella C. Goforth.

CHRISTOPHER MINOT WELD. "Nothing new."

RICHARD WELLING. "Received a degree of Master of Pedagogy from New York University, 1911. Read a paper before the U. S. Association of Civil Service Commissioners on 'Control of Municipal Civil Service Commissions by State Commissions' in June, 1911, at Madison, Wisconsin. Read a paper on 'Pupil Self-Government in the Public Schools' at the N. E. A., San Francisco, July, 1911."

FAIRFAX HENRY WHEELAN. Not heard from.

MERRICK WHITCOMB. "My family is the same; my position is the same; I spend the summer at Shawnee-on-Delaware, Monroe County, Pa., — in fact, almost everything is the same except the color and quantity of my hair."

FRANKLIN DAVIS WHITE. Was born in Milton, Mass., on March 31, 1859. He was the son of Franklin Bartlett and Georgianna Susan (Davis) White. After graduation he was engaged until 1886 in the paper manufacturing business in Boston and New York with different firms in which he was interested. He was for several years in the banking and brokerage business in Boston. After that he was connected with the Consolidated Railway, Electric Light and Construction Company of New York. In 1903 he had an attack of rheumatic fever which left him in a very weakened condition. After that time he was unable to attend to any active business. He spent the Winters of 1905 and 1906 in Mandeville, Jamaica, and seemed better after his return, but soon grew worse until his death, which occurred at his home in Milton, on October 31, 1906, from tuberculosis. He is survived by his widow and only son.

WILLIAM HOWARD WHITE. "Nothing has happened to me since the last report which could possibly interest anybody except my immediate family and myself. So far, I have successfully dodged all the automobiles that were coming my way, and therefore am still alive. The steady procession of the years marks the only change I have to report."

FREDERICK ERWIN WHITING. "Since I retired from active business in 1904 I have been loafing beautifully. A month in the spring fishing and a month in the fall shooting, at my camp in Maine; summers, most of the time, at my farm in Lunenburg, Mass., and winters at Auburndale, Mass., trying to read the books I have been buying for the past twenty-five years. My younger son, Philip, graduated in 1907, following his brother in 1904."

ALFRED WILKINSON. "For ten years and more I have been practicing patent law in New York, without any events of particular interest to others."

OTHO HOLLAND WILLIAMS. Died October 31, 1896. (See Report VII, p. 72.)

WILLIAM CRAWFORD WINLOCK. Died September 20, 1896. (See Report VI, p. 74.)

ROBERT WINSOR. Has not replied. Is still a member of the firm of Kidder, Peabody & Company and prominent in the financial world. Is a trustee of Phillips Exeter Academy and the Middlesex School.

JOHN WOODBURY. "In January, 1911, I resigned the office of Secretary and Executive Officer of the Metropolitan Park Commission of Massachusetts, a position to which I had given the most of my time and the best of my efforts for fifteen years. I still retain offices in Boston and Lynn, but my practice of the law is mostly in connection with the care of property, some of it my own, but largely of others. My winter home is in Boston, but I have changed my summer home from the seashore of Lynn to the farm country of Ponkapog, back of the Blue Hills of Milton."

TEMPORARY AND AFFILIATED MEMBERS

WILLIAM TURELL ANDREWS. Still living in Boston. "No change."

WILLIAM RANSOM BARBOUR. "I have not changed my occupation, but my firm was dissolved on August 1, 1910. The members continue in association and share offices together, each conducting his own practice. On May 1, 1911, I removed to 20 Exchange Place. I have changed my residence. I left Yonkers in September, 1905, when my boys went to the Taft School to prepare for college. Since then Mrs. Barbour and I have lived in various hotels in New York. What our residence address will be after the summer vacation I know not. My elder son is just finishing his Sophomore year at Yale. The younger passed his examinations a year ago, but has not attended college this year. He has been taking some supplementary courses at the Taft School. I expect he will join the Class of 1915. I have no new vital statistics to report. This record as you have it is quite correct. Nor can I send you any news of honors, books, or travels."

JOHN CHARLES BOND. Was born at Derry, New Hampshire, on October 23, 1857. He was the son of John W. and Mary E. (Emery) Bond. He prepared for college at Haverhill, Mass., and he entered Harvard with the Class of 1880 and remained with the class for two years, when, on account of ill health, he was obliged to drop a year. He remained with the Class of 1881 for a term and then was compelled by circumstances to leave college and went to Rochester, N. Y., where he was engaged in the insurance business. After one year he returned to Massachusetts and was for a while in the office of the Boston Economist. He then entered the art store of B. S. Moulton in Boston, and after Mr. Moulton's death the art store of J. F. Cabot, also in Boston, in whose employ he remained for the rest of his life. He made his home for a number of years in Chelsea. On October 23, 1906, he married Susan W. M. Bryant, the widow of a close friend, and had purchased a house in Waverly, with the intention of making it his permanent home. During the Summer of 1909 he had a serious illness, from which, however, he appeared to have recovered, but was taken with erysipelas and died the following spring, after a nine days illness. He is survived by his widow and a stepson of whom he was very fond.

HENRY DENISON BURNHAM. "Since 1905 I have resided for the most part in this vicinity and have made several trips to Europe."

MIGHELLS BACHMAN BUTLER. Not heard from.

FREDERIC EMERSON CHANDLER. Was born at Boston on June 20, 1858. He was the son of Dr. Thomas Henderson Chandler, at one time Dean of the Harvard School of Dentistry. He prepared for college at the Boston Latin School. He was a member of the class for two years and subsequently studied at Strasburg, Leipsic, Berlin, Copenhagen, and Munich. He practiced dentistry in Paris from 1890 to 1892. Returning to America he entered the Tufts Medical School, where he obtained the degree of M.D. in 1905. From that time he practiced medicine in Boston as an oculist. He was an excellent linguist and translated many foreign medical treatises into English and English treatises into other languages. He was especially proficient in the German language and its dialects. He was librarian of the Boston Turnverein Society and arranged and catalogued their library. He subsequently became treasurer of that society. Chandler was a member of the Roxbury Männerchor and also of the Order of Masons. He had suffered for some years with a valvular heart trouble and the immediate cause of his death, which occurred on June 23, 1910, was heart failure. He was married on July 20, 1909, to Nettie May Wright, of Haverhill, who survives him.

EDWARD KANE CLARKE. "Nothing new to chronicle since I last saw you. I seem to continue to live in Europe. I shall be very glad to get a report."

NATHANIEL HENCHMAN DAVIS.

Nathaniel Henchman Davis, son of Samuel and Mary A. (Henchman) Davis, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, April 26, 1858. He prepared for college, first at the private school of Eugene F. Bliss '60, and later at Phillips Exeter Academy; he fully intended to enter Harvard with other members of '80, who had been his friends and companions almost from his birth. Unfortunately his eyes (always weak in his early life) failed him at the most critical time; this necessitated a long period of rest from study, which Davis spent in European travel. He entered Harvard College as a "Special Student" in the Fall of 1877 and continued as such for two years; afterwards he took a special course in the Harvard Law School for one year. He left Cambridge with the Class of 1880. He returned to Cincinnati, where he entered the Senior Class of the Law School of the University of Cincinnati, received his LL.B. degree and was admitted to the Bar of Ohio in 1881. Aside from the time spent at school, in travel, and at Cambridge, he lived his life and did his life's work in Cincinnati. On April 26, 1887, Davis was married to Jeannette Alice Skinner, sister of our beloved classmate, Samuel W. Skinner. His widow and his two children, i.e., a daughter, Louise, now wife of Hugh Whittaker, and a son, Chase Henschman Davis (H. 1913), survive him. Davis' career was a successful one, in the best sense. Not technically a regular member of any Harvard class, yet, while in Cambridge, he was elected to membership in the D. K. E., the Pudding, the A. D. Club, the Glee Club, and many other organizations and societies of those days. His relations with '80 were peculiarly close; instead of being merely affiliated with, he was really adopted by our fellows, who liked and admired him and made him one of us, so far as possible. The same may be said of 1881, though in a less degree. After leaving Cambridge he always had the interests of Harvard at heart; he was President of the Cincinnati Harvard Club; an active worker in the Associated Harvard Clubs organization; and in many other ways gave valuable service and time to the interests of the University. Though admitted to the Bar, he never really became a practicing lawyer, — probably feeling that his real abilities could be put to better use in other, though allied, directions. Possessed of ample means, he steadfastly refused to become a mere idler and looker-on. The list of official positions he occupied in business, charitable, literary, educational, and social organizations in Cincinnati and elsewhere is too long to state, — even if at this time obtainable. Suffice it to say that to each and every one of them he gave the best that was in him, and that the value of his service was in every instance openly recognized and gladly appreciated by those most capable of judging. In 1898 he became a Director of the Central Trust and Safe Deposit Company, the oldest organization of its kind in Ohio; in 1901 he was made its President and continued as such until his death. Seldom can it be said of any man that the place he was called upon to fill in the practical affairs of life was the one he was exactly fitted by nature to occupy. The above, however, may truly be said of Davis' connection with this corporation. He was justly proud of the success he made, and loved the work he was called upon to do. When his health began to fail, his hardest trial, next to the thought of leaving family and friends, was the thought of surrendering the work to which his best efforts had been devoted. Though physically strong and robust beyond the average, he began to fail as years went by. He knew for a long time before his death of the aneurism of the heart which finally was fatal; he knew that his end might come at any moment. He manfully tried his best to live. The final stroke was sudden and unexpected to all except, probably, himself. He died November 17, 1910. His attractive personality, his true friendships for those he really was fond of, his unfailing courtesy to all, his kindness and consideration for those under his control, and his sincere enthusiasm and devotion to objects he deemed worthy, were known to all.

THOMAS CHADWICK DAY. Died April 25, 1905.
(See Report VII, p. 76.)

WILLIAM RIDDLE DUNCKLEE. Died February 10, 1889. (See Report VII, p. 76.)

PIERPONT EDWARDS. Died January 22, 1912.

CLIFFORD GARDNER. Died April 20, 1879. (See Report II, p. 95.)

WILBUR FISKE GILLETTE. Died July 29, 1881.
(See Report II, p. 96.)

WILLIAM MORTON GRINNELL.

William Morton Grinnell died of pneumonia at his residence in New York on February 9, 1906. Grinnell was born in the City of New York, February 28, 1857, a son of W. F. Grinnell. He studied at Stuttgart and at Phillips Exeter and entered Harvard with the Class of 1880. Impaired health prevented his going through with the class and compelled him to leave Harvard during his second year there. Entering the consular service of his country, he served at Lyons, France, for a time; became a lawyer and entered upon the practice of that profession at Paris, France, where he was the Counsel of the American Embassy from 1881 to 1886. While in France he received the degrees of Bachelier en Droit and Bachelier ès Lettres. Returning to America, he took up the practice of the law, which he continued until his appointment by President Harrison as Assistant Secretary of State. The duties of that office occupied him for a few years at Washington, when he returned to New York and entered again upon the practice of the law, but in a short time he became a partner of the banking house of Morton, Bliss & Co., and so continued for several years, retiring, however, from the firm upon its incorporation into the Morton Trust Company. His relations with Morton, Bliss & Co., were interrupted by the outbreak of the Spanish War, when he offered his services to the government and entered the army with the rank of Major, serving until the conclusion of the war, and thereupon resumed his connection with the banking firm. During his business life in New York he became a director of the Illinois Central Railroad, the Gunly Mountain Coal Company, the Mount Morris Bank, the Rio Grande, the Sierra Madre and Pacific R. R. Company, and the Sea Beach Land Company, and retained those directorships until his death. His contribution to general literature was several books on contemporaneous social and economic questions, among them "the Rise and Fall of the United States," the "Regeneration of the United States," and "Social Theories and Social Facts." In 1890 he received from the French Government, for distinguished legal service in connection with International Copyright, the Cross of the Legion of Honor. His clubs and societies were: Union Club of New York, Metropolitan Club of New York, Metropolitan of Washington, University, Lawyers, Harvard, Riding, Fencing, Society of the Mayflower, New York Zoological, and Military Order of Foreign Wars. On December 8, 1898, he married, at Washington, Elizabeth Lee Ernst, daughter of General Oswald H. Ernst, and she survives him with two children, Elizabeth Lee Grinnell and George Morton Grinnell.

J. D. F.

GEORGE WEBSTER HALL. Not heard from.

EDWARD HOLLAND HASTINGS. Died March 4, 1889. (See Report IV, p. 87.)

ARTHUR CYRUS HILL. "No changes and nothing of interest since last report."

ARTHUR WILSON HOOPER. Is still living in Brookline. The following paragraph corrects several errors in the biographical statement in the report of 1905.

"Arthur Wilson Hooper, son of Nathaniel and Harriet Rose (Wilson) Hooper, was born at Boston, Mass., on January 5, 1859. He prepared for college at Noble's School in Boston. After leaving college he studied law at the Harvard Law School and at the Boston University Law School and received the degree of LL.B. from the latter university in 1881. He was admitted to the Bar in January, 1882. He moved to Colorado in March, 1898, where he was also admitted to the Bar. He returned to Massachusetts in October, 1900, and is now living in Brookline. Since his marriage in 1898 he has travelled extensively abroad."

CLARENCE GRAY JONES. Died March 16, 1892. (See Report V, p. 90.)

EBEN DYER JORDAN. Is travelling abroad and has not been heard from. He is still the head of the Jordan, Marsh Company. Since 1905 he has built the Boston Opera House, of which he has been the chief supporter, and must be considered as the founder of permanent grand opera in Boston.

GEORGE FREDERICK JOYCE. "No changes."

DANIEL WALTER LORD. "The old facts of the last Class Report still hold good."

THOMAS WILLIAM LUDLOW. Died April 17, 1894. (See Report V, p. 91.)

GERRY AUSTIN LYMAN. Was born in Boston and was the son of George Hinckley and Maria C. R. (Austin) Lyman. He prepared for college at private schools and with a private tutor. He left college in the freshman year and was for several years afterward in the cotton business in the South. In 1887 he entered the employ of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad and was freight agent of the road at St. Joseph, Mo., for several years. He then removed to New York City and was connected with the dock department for a year and a half. In 1894 he became connected with the New York Telephone Company, in whose employ he was at the time of his death. It appears that he had been suffering for a number of years from heart trouble. He never complained, however, and it was only after his death that it was known how much he had been suffering. He was ill in bed only a few days before his death on October 20, 1907. The immediate cause of his death was pneumonia.

JOHN LAURIE MARTIN. Was born in New York City on October 8, 1857. He was the son of William Runyon and Sarah Frances (Bacon) Martin. He prepared for college at a private school and New York University, where he spent one year. He was obliged to be absent from Cambridge during our senior year, but returned in 1881 for his degree. After leaving college he was for several years interested in cattle raising, at first in New York State, and then on a ranch in Nebraska. In 1885 he sold out his interest in the ranch, and moved to Morganton, N. C., where he was interested in the Piedmont Lumber Ranch and Mining Company. From 1888 he had his office in New York City and was interested in promoting numerous business enterprises. He has also engaged in the real estate business in New York, where he resided. He was present throughout our reunion in 1905 and thoroughly enjoyed the opportunity of meeting his classmates, many of whom he had not seen since our college days. He had planned a delightful holiday for himself and family in Europe, but on account of a business engagement sent his wife and two boys on a steamer sailing on June 7, intending to follow them on June 14. On the day after his family sailed he was taken ill with what was thought to be appendicitis, and removed to the Roosevelt Hospital, but on Sunday pleuro-pneumonia appeared, and he died on Sunday morning, June 13, 1906.

FRANK WOODARD MERRICK. "President of American Stay Company; President of Union Lock Stitch Company; both located in East Boston. Have invented two important new machines for shoe and harness work."

HENRY DAVIS MINOT. Died November 14, 1890. (See Report VII, p. 80.)

HICKY HUNT MORGAN. Died August 6, 1879. (See Report II, p. 104.)

CHARLES MARCUS OSBORN. Died February 27, 1903. (See Report VII, p. 81.)

CHARLES HIRAM PEW. Died June 25, 1880. (See Report II, p. 106.)

ARTHUR SALEM PLIMPTON. Son of Salem Marsh and Beulah Marsh (Belknap) Plimpton, was born at Wells River, Vt., December 13, 1857. He prepared for college at Phillips Exeter and Academy entered Harvard with the class, but was obliged by illness to leave college before completing his course. He was engaged for a time in a manufacturing business at Southbridge, Mass., but in 1881 moved to Brooklyn, N. Y., and entered the employ of the White, Potter & Paige Co., picture frames, mouldings, and builders' cabinet work, of which company he was Treasurer at the time of his death. He was married on June 18, 1884, to Sarah Isabella Tomes, who died on August 28, 1899. His home after removing to Brooklyn was at Hollis, Queens County, N. Y., and it was there that he passed quietly away, without suffering, after about a month's illness from an intestinal trouble, on February 15, 1909. His daughter and four sons survive him.

WILLIAM CARROLL PRICE. "Am still residing in the city of Wilkesbarre, Pa., engaged in the practice of law. No honors nor public office except that for the past six years I have been employed as the County Solicitor for the County of Luzerne."

WILLIAM STANTON ROGERS. "I virtually retired from the active practice of law many years ago. Have lately bought a fine farm in northeastern Massachusetts and mean to try to do a bit of farming."

FRANK RUSSAK. "Your circular letter of October 1 reached me here in Paris. It is with regret that I admit having been very remiss in not answering your circular letters of preceding dates, and that I have been of the number from whom 'No reply' was received for the Class Report; for I believe that I had not sent in what was required for the earlier Class Report. However, I shall be happy to do the needful now and send you data concerning myself to cover a period of years. If you will be good enough to let me know up to what date I had sent in a report I shall complete the same to date. Or I may write up a report from the time I left college to date and send this so that you have it towards the end of December. I shall await your advice in regard to this. You ask whether I still play the 'Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2.' I still play this, but very infrequently. And when I do it is not without thought of my Harvard friends who lent me encouragement in my musical pleasures and relaxations. I regret to say that I do not give the attention to music that I should like to give. About five years ago I studied the piano with Moszkowski, the well-known composer, and at that time devoted some time to music. But in recent years my life has undergone a great change and to the detriment of some of the idealities of life that are so well expressed through music. Perhaps I have lived too much in the realm of the ideal and I now see life as it is. This much is certain, when I was at Harvard College my view of life, as I pictured it to myself, was a very ideal one."

LOUIS PHELPS SCOVILLE. "I continued in the banking business in Chicago from 1905 until about the close of 1907, when the bank with which I was connected went into liquidation. During most of the year 1908 I was engaged in winding up the affairs of the bank and disposing of its assets. In the Spring of 1909 I was offered a position as Division Sales Manager with the American Multigraph Sales Company of Cleveland, Ohio, in charge of the St. Louis Office, and removed with my family to this city, where we have since resided. My two oldest sons are with me in business and there are no changes in the list of 'vital statistics' which I return to you. My house address is 4358 Morgan St., and office 412 Fullerton Building. I am a member of the local Harvard Club and of the Mercantile Club."

ADNA BALCH SHAW. "Nothing new to report. Same business as before."

CHARLES SUMNER TAUSIG. Died January 2, 1898. (See Report VI, p. 87.)

WILLETT LOSEE TITUS. Died September 26, 1879. (See Report II, p. 110.)

JOHN SAMUEL WARREN. Since last report removed from Franktown, Ontario, to Fair Haven, Vermont, and in October, 1910, changed from the diocese of Vermont to that of Maine and became Rector of St. Paul's Church at Fort Fairfield.

MORRILL WYMAN. Still living in Cambridge except when travelling. Engaged in no business or profession.
